“Oliver Wight, being the inventors of IBP, are a great resource to be able to tap into. Being well educated is a crucial element of doing IBP right.”

VP IBP and Supply Chain, Pharmaceutical Organisation

Hello...

We can help you deliver real business results – things like increased revenues and market share. How can we be so sure? Because we've created the perfect formula for business improvement; cascading knowledge transfer from us to you. Unlike other consultancies, we don't do the job for you. We teach you how to do it right, the first time, so you can continue to pass that knowledge on and make improvements long after we're gone.

And where does that knowledge stem from? Every one of our Oliver Wight Managing Associates played a major role in improving business performance at their own organisation through successful transformation projects. They have all held senior positions in well-known companies across diverse industries, countries and cultures. So, they understand what your day to day challenges are and how to overcome them.

Integrated Business Planning:

An Executive Guide

In this uncertain world it is vital that management teams are able to anticipate change early, understand key implications, and make timely decisions to ensure you manage the business in both normal and extraordinary circumstances whilst staying ahead of the competition.

Today we are being tested in ways that are unprecedented. An effective process that enables business leaders to navigate these challenges and plan their way beyond them is critical. Integrated Business Planning is that process, but for it to drive real success it requires a clear-eyed view of what it takes to make it work. This workshop is designed for leaders and those who engage with them. It is an opportunity to explore what IBP can do for your business and deepen your understanding of the process to ensure you are prepared for the future, whatever it holds.

Workshop Essentials

Cost: £750 per delegate + VAT

Duration: 1 day

Language: English

Location: Global

What our delegates said:

“Really concise overview of the whole IBP process - perfect for Executives to understand the process, and for others to refresh their memory on some of the key principles.”

S&OP Manager,
FMCG Organisation

Who is it for?

Ultimately everyone in your organisation. But fundamental to a successful IBP implementation is the commitment of your organisation's most senior executive. This workshop is designed for you:

- Leadership team
- General management team
- Specialists leading product management, demand management and supply management
- Finance leaders

What will I learn?

- A comprehensive overview of the IBP process, the huge benefits and what it takes to make it happen successfully and sustainably
- How to align your planning processes and business strategy over a 24 to 36 month horizon with full product portfolio strategy and financial integration
- An understanding of how IBP can identify gaps in performance far enough in advance for your business to re-optimize and use scenario modelling to deliver optimal results

Integrated Business Planning for

Supply Chain:

Delivering Business Growth

The modern supply chain is increasingly complex and diverse. That means your executive and general management team must understand how to design, implement and leverage the supply chain planning step within your IBP process.

Effectively integrating supply chain strategy, planning and execution creates a competitive advantage for your organisation and will be a key enabler for realising your overall strategic goals and objectives. This workshop teaches you how to make that shift from traditional supply chain planning to value chain thinking, integrating the strategic supply chain planning process with the product portfolio and demand steps to deliver exceptional business performance.

Workshop Essentials

Cost: £950 per delegate + VAT

Duration: 2 days

Integrated Tactical Planning:

Linking Plans to Execution

So, your business has a good Integrated Business Planning process in place, but you still find yourself fire-fighting in an attempt to manage the short-term? Unfortunately, that means the full benefits of IBP are not being realised. We can help.

Our Integrated Tactical Planning workshop is about making plans happen; getting the right people to turn the aggregate level IBP plans into a detailed level execution plan, enabling your business to identify and manage changes within the execution window.

Workshop Essentials

Cost: £950 per delegate + VAT

Duration: 2 days

Language: English

Location: Global

Who is it for?

- IBP process leaders
- Supply chain managers
- Operations managers
- Site managers
- Demand and supply managers and planners
- Distribution planners
- Customer service managers
- Sales managers
- Product co-ordinators and facilitators
- Quality and warehouse managers

What will I learn?

- An understanding of how Integrated Tactical Planning can define a way to execute the IBP plan whilst managing and communicating the inevitable changes across all core processes including demand, product and supply
- The importance of senior managers focusing on months four and beyond, whilst the short-term is successfully kept under control
- How to work hand in hand with the support functions required to turn your plans into reality

“The captain of the ship shouldn’t be the one stoking the fires. Integrated Tactical Planning is about creating credible processes to allow leaders to do their job.”

All About Ollie

A pioneer of planning processes, Oliver Wight was recognised around the world as an innovator, helping businesses increase productivity, improve inventory turnover and customer responsiveness.

Emphasising the importance of the people side of manufacturing solutions set Ollie apart as a leading thinker in business education, always looking to the future and finding ways to advance.

Oliver Wight

An ambition that became reality

In 1969 Oliver Wight's goal was to 'make production and inventory control just a little bit better than it was before'. Over 50 years have passed and we have worked with some of the world's leading businesses to revolutionise their processes.

Ollie's sensitivity to people broke down barriers. He communicated his innovative ideas in a way that gained acceptance, commitment and enthusiasm.

Somewhere in the early years of the computer revolution, the role of people was misplaced. Ollie's personal mission was to reposition people as a vital part of any business and educate them with the understanding that they need to use new tools. As he put it, "Computers are not the key to success, people are." This remains a core philosophy of the Oliver Wight companies.

Ollie had two great gifts; he could take complicated subjects, unravel them, and make them simple. He used these gifts to build an enduring legacy in business processes. Nearly every company using his planning processes and philosophies experienced significant business benefits.

Ollie once said, quite modestly,

"I've left some footprints."

Those who have chosen to follow them are better off both personally and professionally.

Best Practice Education

Oliver Wight was founded on the principle that educated people make educated decisions. It is the people within your organisation that will ultimately ensure business excellence through their drive for continuous improvement and sustainable results.

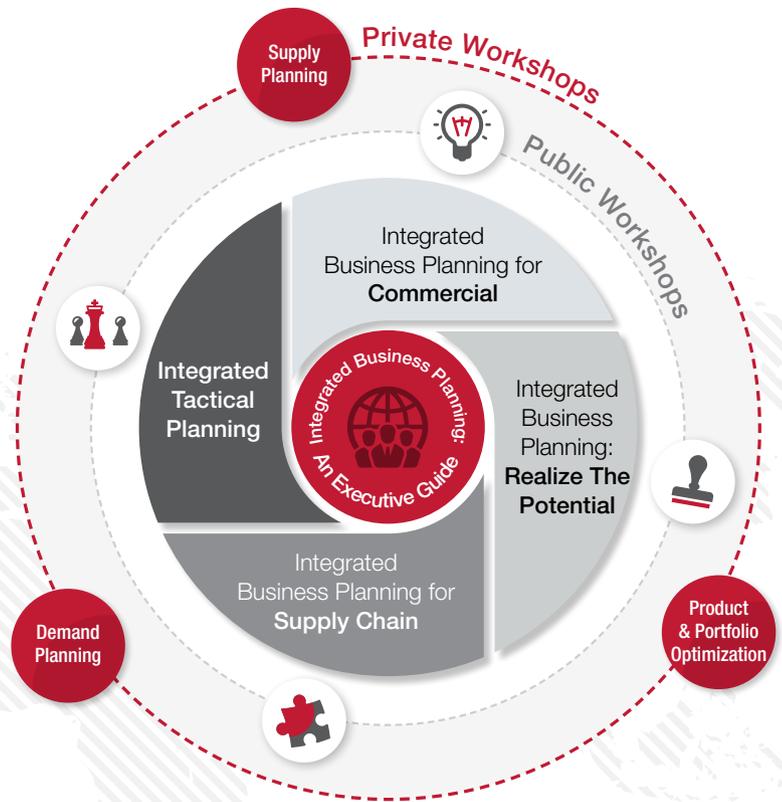

As ownership of the IBP process shifts from the supply chain to the senior executive team, our virtual workshops have everything you need to ensure your business is fit for the future. We offer a comprehensive range of interactive workshops, tailored to meet your organisation's specific business objectives.

We also offer private workshops with content tailored to your business challenges and strategic objectives ideal for teams of up to 25 people. In these private sessions we provide insight into how IBP can be designed and implemented specifically with your organisation's needs and industry in mind.

Our flagship one-day course, Integrated Business Planning: An Executive Guide, provides you with a comprehensive overview of IBP including how to anticipate and manage business impacts to re-align, re-optimize, and remain agile.

We have developed three practitioner workshops; Integrated Business Planning for Commercial, Integrated Business Planning: Realize the Potential and Integrated Business Planning for Supply Chain. Each of these two-day workshops are designed for leaders in core functions, supporting the IBP process. Their sister workshop, Integrated Tactical Planning provides a Class A understanding of short-term planning, detailing how businesses can extinguish firefighting and manage short-term planning effectively.

What is IBP?

More efficient, more effective and more profitable: that's what sets businesses with Integrated Business Planning (IBP) apart. The industry's best practice model and Sales & Operations Planning's evolutionary, IBP is a common sense process for aligning plans every month, helping to allocate critical resources and satisfy customers in the most profitable way. IBP is all about predicting and responding positively in changing conditions.

S&OP vs IBP: What's the difference?

Sales and Operations Planning

- Owned by supply chain
- Agreeing a forecast so supply and operations can plan production
- Internally focused and supply driven
- Debating the numbers

Integrated Business Planning

- Owned by the head of the business
- Customer focused and demand driven
- Focused on deploying the strategy
- Identifying gaps and making gap closing decisions

Virtual Workshop Planner

Like the majority of businesses, we have changed the way we are working to ensure the continued delivery of our educational programmes and thought leadership services.

All of our workshops are being hosted virtually so you can log on and receive expert led education without leaving your workplace or home office. Despite these challenging times, our aim is to enhance your learning, and in turn, your business.

“A very professional virtual session with the right mix between theory and practical advice providing us with the key elements to succeed.”
